INTRODUCTION

Increasing population density creates the need to build more, develop more, and transport more, our environment is under continued stress and impact. There is a need to understand that growth cannot come at the risk to resources and ecology. Sustainability can be defined as a set of environmental, economic and social conditions in which all of society has the capacity and opportunity to maintain and improve its quality of life indefinitely without degrading the quantity, quality or availability of natural, economic, and social resources. As the stewards of society's infrastructure, civil engineers must take the lead in applying sustainability to selection, planning, design, and construction. Historically, sustainability considerations have been approached by engineers as constraints on their designs. But with its growing importance to civil engineering, professionals should move towards incorporating sustainability principles into their daily practice. Sustainable design requires a complete assessment of a design in place and time. Sustainable engineering practice should meet human needs for natural resources, industrial products, energy, food, transportation, shelter, and effective waste and material management while conserving and protecting environmental quality and the natural resource base essential for future development. Civil engineers can contribute solutions to sustainable development and green design issues. Commitment to this challenge requires that civil engineers acknowledge their professional obligation, extend their knowledge base, and participate in all levels of policy decisions.

OBJECTIVES

The conference shall serve as a platform to create awareness and appreciation amongst academicians, scientists, researchers and practitioners from various disciplines and sectors about developing and implementing sustainable practices and technologies that shall minimize the impact on our environment.
